A QUERY ANSWERED.

"A workingman" would like to know, if the reopening of the mints to silver would increase general prices by increasing the volume of money in circulation, what benefit it would be to wage earners who would then have to pay more for the necessities of life.

The Denver News gives the best possible answer to this question: That it has been established by experience that in time when metallic money has been abundant the advantages accruing to the laboring class in the greater demand for labor and in better wages have much more than counterbalanced the additional cost of living because of the high price of general commodities.

The contraction of the currency which has been going on for years in the United States has all but ruined the farming industry by levying prices below the profit point and in the case of some staple articles below the actual cost of production. The same cause has stifled industrial growth and borne heavily on the products of nearly every other line of labor. The skilled artisan has been slower to feel the disastrous effects than the farmer because the adverse influences have been measurably checked by the benefits of labor organization.

A scant currency produces deplorable industrial conditions, which need no emphasizing just now, when there are more workers in enforced idleness in this country and Europe than at any time since the period preceding the Chartist riots in England.

"A Workingman" should be influenced by the fact that the two greatest labor organizations in America, under the leadership of Mr. Gompers and Mr. Powderly, are committed to the cause of free coinage and the eternal banishment of a money famine. The same is true across the ocean. The organized labor of England is nearly a unit with English farmers in the fight for the restoration of silver to an equality with gold at the mints. There could hardly be such unity as exists on this question among the best informed working people if it were not the interest of labor to be arrayed on the side of free coinage.

Every fresh influx of metallic money in quantity has conspicuously raised the standard of wages and materially benefited those who depend on their labor for a living. The great silver discoveries of the middle of the sixteenth century trebled wages in England. The gold output of California was followed by unexampled general prosperity in the United States. The effect of the Australian gold discoveries on England is thus narrated by Alison the historian:

"The era of a contracted currency and consequent low prices and general misery, interrupted by passing gleams of prosperity was at an end. Prices rose rapidly and rose steadily; wages advanced in a similar proportion; exports and imports enormously increased, while crime and misery as rapidly diminished. Wheat rose from 40s. to 55s. and 60s.; but the wages of labor advanced in nearly as great proportion; they were found to be about 30 per cent higher on an average than they had been five years before. In Ireland the change was still greater and probably unequalled in so short a time in the annals of history. Wages of country labor rose from 4d. a day to 1s. 6d. or 2s."

Surely the wage workers of the United States have reason to be numbered among the free coinage hosts, for no class is more interested in stamping out financial conditions that place producers at the mercy of money lenders and congests the bulk of the profits of production in a few money centers for the benefit of cornorants who earn nothing, but fatten off the sweat of others and use confiscated wealth to debauch legislation and perpetuate their supremacy over the masses of the people.—Denver News.

We are selling best two and four point BARBED WIRE at 4 1-4 cents per pound. The oldest inhabitant will tell you that this is remarkably cheap, unparalleled in the history of Carson.

We have reduced the prices of everything we carry in stock; Groceries, Provisions, Liquors, Hardware, Tinware, Crockery, Paints, Oils, Wall Paper, etc., can be purchased at this Emporium at a less percentage of profit than elsewhere. No necessity for sending your money to California, thinking you can save something for we will be more than pleased to duplicate your bills.

Give us a trial order and make your comparisons with purchases at home or abroad and be convinced. Orders from the country, as well as Carson and its environs will receive our prompt attention.
